Credit Union of Georgia Collects Hundreds of Toys to Benefit Toys for Tots

(Woodstock, GA) Credit Union of Georgia participated in this year's local Toys for Tots Drive by setting up donation centers at each of its 6 branch locations, where throughout the month of December, Credit Union members and employees contributed hundreds of toys for boys and girls in need.

Each year, Toys for Tots helps less fortunate children throughout the United States experience the joy of Christmas by coordinating annual toy collection drives and distribution campaigns.

Credit Union of Georgia is proud to give back to the communities it serves and honored to participate in programs such as Toys for Tots that benefit such a truly worthy cause.

Credit Unions are member-owned, not-for-profit financial institutions that provide many of the same financial services that banks do, including checking and savings accounts, loans, mortgages, credit cards, home equity loans, and much more. However, they are uniquely different because any money made by the credit union is returned to its members/owners in the form of higher dividends and lower lending interest rates.

For 50 years, Credit Union of Georgia has been a part of the north metro Atlanta community. Credit Union of Georgia is one of the most stable financial institutions in the nation, according to Bauer's Financial Reports — an authority on financial institution stability.

As a state chartered credit union, Credit Union of Georgia is strictly regulated by the Department of Banking and Finance and the National Credit Union Administration, an agency of the U.S. government and insured by the National Credit Union Administration, NCUA.
