

Mike Mercer, Terry Brown and Warren Butler

United 1st Federal Credit Union is awarded plaque

At the recent annual meeting of the Georgia Credit Union Affiliates in Savannah, United 1st Federal Credit Union was presented with a plaque commemorating the contributions made to the Georgia Credit Union Political Action Committee (CUPAC). United 1st members contribute by authorizing an automatic deduction for a dollar or two from their account. That mounts up to a bit of money when all the members do it. So, why does a credit union need a political action committee?

One credit union doesn't need a political action committee. The Georgia Credit Union Affiliates which is the name of the organization that most of the credit unions in Georgia are a member of needs a voice in Atlanta and Washington, D.C. Increasing the insurance on members' funds to $250,000.00 per account is one of the things the political action committee worked on in the past year.

Pictured (l-r) are Mike Mercer, president of the CEO of Georgia Credit Union Affiliates, Terry Brown, the vice president of the board of directors of United 1st Federal Credit Union and Warren Butler, the chairman of the Board of Georgia Credit Union League.